

ILI Law Review

Emphasis on legal research is gaining popularity albeit at a slow pace in spite of research being an essential requirement of legal profession be in terms of practice or in academia. As a result quality legal research has become increasingly challenging and dwindling rapidly due to lack of encouragement and recognition.

The ILI Law Review is an initiative of ILI to encourage scholarship in the fields of law and allied subjects among the law students, academia, bar and bench in India and abroad. It is expected that the ILI Law Review will cater to the desired needs of scholars, researchers, lawyers, policy makers and dedicated law students in the diverse arenas of legal research.

The ILI Law Review will be an Online Journal and each article submitted for publication goes through a three-tier selection process. The selection process includes vetting of the articles by students, experts from ILI faculty and finally by an external expert. It is also important to note that the ILI Law Review is proposed to be an environment friendly publication because at no stage of the publication papers are used. Many factors make the Law Review unique and different from other journals. It is the first online law journal in the country to be assigned with the ISSN code, which is indicative of its quality and standard. As we believe in unconditional dissemination of knowledge, the journal is open-sourced and all articles are available free of cost.

It is our intention to make available all issues free of charge through our online archive, thus making it a kind of free non-commercial service dedicated to the advancement of legal research and education. Through its peer-reviewed processes and constant dedication to maintain international standards, the ILI Law Review aims to be a vehicle of quality legal scholarship within the country and abroad.
